

Cocoa Products of Cameroon: The Trade Analysis of the Latest Exports

Cocoa beans, a type of seed that is widely used in the food industry for producing a wide range of cocoa and chocolate products, are demanded by the global consumer base. The wide preference of the global population for its products and its use in chocolate manufacturing has increased its global trade. As we all know, chocolate is one of the most popularly consumed products worldwide. The consistent demand has driven the massive global trade. The limited growing regions with a humid tropical climate within 20 degrees of the equator, like the Ivory Coast and Ghana, along with the critical input for large industries, have maintained economic importance. Cameroon Import Data says, the country in Central Africa, bordered by Nigeria and the Republic of the Congo in the west, and in the south direction has gradually emerged as a substantial contributor to the worldwide export market of cocoa products due to the rising national output and the improved agronomic practices.

The expansion in marketed production and the growth of local processing have resulted in a total export valuation of cocoa products from Cameroon worth 1 billion US dollars in 2024. The reliable access of the country to main ports and the improved rural roads have benefited the overall trade. GOVERNMENT INITIATIVES SUPPORTING THE COCOA PRODUCTS EXPORTS OF CAMEROON IN 2024

The launch of a digital traceability platform by the Cocoa and Coffee Interprofessional Council has helped the country comply with the rising standards of sustainability. It has provided a protective market access to the sensitive buyers. The quality-based bonus scheme for cocoa producers has improved the overall exported bean quality while actively avoiding discounts, boosting the competitiveness of the country in an international manner.

The establishment of a regulatory monitoring and sanitary surveillance platform has reduced the risk of export rejections while enhancing the reliability of Cameroonian cocoa for overseas buyers. The encouragement and support for local cocoa processing have stimulated the local cocoa processing capacity, making the sector more profitable.
