

IND vs NZ: Two Changes India Are Likely To Make For 2nd ODI, Will Ayush Badoni Make ODI Debut In Rajkot?

The India vs New Zealand ODI series has already delivered excitement, and all eyes are now on the 2nd ODI in Rajkot. After analyzing India's performance in the opening match, the team management is expected to make two tactical changes to strengthen the squad. Fans are also eager to know whether Ayush Badoni will finally get his ODI debut.

Let's take a closer look at the possible changes India may introduce for the must-watch clash.

India's Strategy After the 1st ODI

India showed flashes of brilliance in the first ODI but also exposed a few areas that need improvement. The middle-order stability and bowling balance were not at their best, which has prompted discussions around squad rotation.

With the series still open, the team management may opt for fresh legs and better combinations to gain an edge over New Zealand.

Change #1: Ayush Badoni Likely to Replace Middle-Order Batter

One of the biggest talking points ahead of the 2nd ODI is the possible ODI debut of Ayush Badoni. The young all-rounder has impressed in domestic cricket and the IPL with his calm batting and handy bowling skills.

Badoni's inclusion could provide:

- More depth in the middle order
- A reliable spin option
- Improved fielding standards

If selected, he is likely to replace a struggling middle-order batter who failed to convert starts in the first ODI. Rajkot's batting-friendly pitch could be the perfect stage for Badoni to showcase his talent.

Change #2: Bowling Combination to Be Tweaked

India may also make a bowling change, especially in the pace or spin department. New Zealand batters handled India's attack well in the death overs, which suggests the need for better variation and control.

A possible change could include:

- Introducing a wrist spinner for more wicket-taking options
- Replacing an expensive pacer with a more economical bowler

This adjustment would help India maintain pressure during the middle overs and restrict New Zealand's scoring rate.

Rajkot Pitch & Conditions: What to Expect?

The Saurashtra Cricket Association Stadium in Rajkot is known for:

- Flat batting tracks
- High-scoring matches
- Minimal assistance for bowlers

This means India will prioritize strong batting depth and bowlers who can execute slower balls and yorkers effectively.

Will Ayush Badoni Make His ODI Debut?

While no official confirmation has been made, strong sources suggest that Ayush Badoni is in serious contention for a place in the playing XI. His all-round abilities make him a valuable asset, especially on a pitch like Rajkot.

If selected, it could mark the beginning of an exciting ODI career for the young star.

Final Thoughts

The IND vs NZ 2nd ODI promises thrilling action, with India likely to introduce two key changes to improve performance. The potential debut of Ayush Badoni adds extra excitement for fans eager to see fresh talent in the Indian setup.