

RCB vs SRH: RCB Playing XI Predicted, Impact Player, And Will Josh Hazlewood Play?

The much-awaited clash between Royal Challengers Bengaluru (RCB) and Sunrisers Hyderabad (SRH) promises high-intensity action in the ongoing IPL season. Fans are especially curious about the RCB playing XI, the impact player strategy, and whether Josh Hazlewood will feature in this crucial encounter.

RCB vs SRH Match Preview

RCB have shown a mixed run of form this season, with their batting unit performing consistently while bowling remains a concern. Facing SRH, a team known for its explosive top order and improving bowling attack, RCB will need to bring their best combination on the field.

RCB Playing XI Predicted

Based on current form, team balance, and conditions, here is the predicted RCB playing XI:

1. Virat Kohli
2. Faf du Plessis (C)
3. Rajat Patidar
4. Glenn Maxwell
5. Cameron Green
6. Dinesh Karthik (WK)
7. Mahipal Lomror
8. Karn Sharma
9. Mohammed Siraj
10. Yash Dayal
11. Reece Topley

This lineup provides a strong top order with experience and power-hitting ability, while the bowling unit has a mix of pace and spin options.

Impact Player Strategy

RCB are likely to use Suyash Prabhudessai or Anuj Rawat as their impact player depending on the match situation. If RCB bat first, an extra bowler could be introduced in the second innings. Conversely, if they chase, an additional batter might be brought in to strengthen the lineup.

The impact player rule has been a game-changer in the IPL, allowing teams to adapt dynamically based on match conditions, and RCB could use it smartly against SRH.

Know About: PBKS Vs GT Match Prediction

Will Josh Hazlewood Play?

One of the biggest talking points ahead of the match is the availability of Josh Hazlewood. The Australian pacer has been dealing with fitness concerns, which have kept him out of a few games. As per the latest updates, Hazlewood is likely to undergo a fitness test before the match.

If declared fit, he could replace Reece Topley or Yash Dayal in the playing XI, significantly strengthening RCB's pace attack with his accuracy and experience. However, if he is not fully match-fit, RCB might continue with their current bowling combination to avoid risks.

Key Players to Watch

- Virat Kohli: In sublime form and a key pillar of RCB's batting
- Glenn Maxwell: A game-changer with both bat and ball
- Mohammed Siraj: Leading the pace attack with consistency

Conclusion

The RCB vs SRH clash is set to be a thrilling contest with plenty of tactical intrigue. While RCB's batting looks solid, their bowling combination—especially the inclusion or absence of Josh Hazlewood—could play a decisive role. Fans will be eagerly waiting for the final team announcement as RCB aim to secure a crucial win in the tournament.