

IPL 2026: List Of Injured Players And Partially Unavailable Ft Mitchell Starc, Hazlewood, Pathirana

The IPL 2026 season has already grabbed headlines, but injuries and player availability concerns are shaping team strategies early on. Several big names, including Mitchell Starc, Josh Hazlewood, and Matheesha Pathirana, are either injured or partially unavailable, impacting their franchises significantly.

Key Injured Players in IPL 2026

Injuries are an unfortunate part of cricket, and IPL 2026 is no exception. One of the biggest concerns has been Mitchell Starc, who has reportedly been dealing with workload management and minor fitness issues. His absence or limited participation could affect his team's pace attack, especially in powerplay and death overs.

Similarly, Matheesha Pathirana, known for his slinging action and yorker accuracy, has faced fitness setbacks. His recurring injury concerns have made his availability uncertain, forcing teams to rethink their bowling combinations.

Partially Unavailable Players

Another major name in focus is Josh Hazlewood, who has been managing fitness concerns and international commitments. While he may not be fully ruled out, his participation could be limited to select matches depending on his recovery and workload management plan.

Franchises often face challenges when players are partially unavailable, especially overseas stars. This affects team balance, combination, and match strategies throughout the tournament.

Impact on Team Combinations

The absence or limited availability of these players has a direct impact on team selection and performance. Teams relying on Starc or Hazlewood for their pace dominance may need to turn to backups or uncapped players.

For instance:

- Teams may opt for additional all-rounders to balance the squad
- Young Indian pacers could get more opportunities
- Spin-heavy strategies may be used on slower pitches

The Impact Player rule in IPL also gives franchises some flexibility, allowing them to adjust based on match situations and player availability.

Other Players Under Watch

Apart from these stars, a few other players are also under observation due to minor injuries or workload concerns. With a packed international calendar, franchises are being extra cautious to avoid long-term injuries.
